

GROUP IT DIRECTOR

Edinburgh Area

c. £70,000 + executive package

Our client, a prominent, progressive, results and customer orientated company, is one of the UK's largest and most successful independent groups in its field. Committed to people, quality and continuous improvement, the appointment of a Group IT Director is now integral to its development strategy within a demanding, rapidly changing and competitive market place.

Reporting to the Finance Director and working closely with senior management across the Group, you will lead a compact, highly focused and motivated Group IT function providing central computer support, advice and strategic direction to the business throughout the UK within a devolved divisional structure. Apart from setting corporate IT policies, technical standards and procedures, you will co-ordinate the operation, support and management of the main UNIX based systems, PC hardware and software, as well as maintaining and developing the Group's disaster recovery plans, purchasing agreements and communications strategies covering voice, data, LANs and WANs amongst other matters.

Of graduate calibre and strategically orientated, you will be well motivated with highly developed technical skills, particularly in the area of communications. As well as being able to demonstrate a proven track record of continuous progression, you will possess strong interpersonal, people management, organisational and leadership qualities. Some previous exposure to multi-site operations within a decentralised environment will also prove advantageous.
