

Head of Public Affairs

London/Edinburgh

Our client is a leading financial services organisation with both a UK and international presence.

Reporting to the Group Director of Communications, you will be instrumental in building and driving forward an integrated corporate communications strategy. Working closely with senior executives and international businesses within the Group, you will take a proactive approach to developing policy positions and key messages on a wide range of issues, and to engaging directly with relevant stakeholders from both government and industry.

Financial Services

You will have a strong track record of delivering at senior management level in a public affairs role, ideally within a large and complex organisation, together with a sound understanding of the financial services industry and the PLC environment. With a proven ability of advising senior executive management and achieving buy-in from a diverse range of colleagues, you will also be a self-starter with plenty of drive and initiative and first class interpersonal skills.

This is a new position with a fresh mandate, and represents an outstanding opportunity to make an impact in a high profile role with a Group wide remit.
